Dr. Yang-Won Suh

Korea Environment Institute,
South Korea

Dr. Yang-Won Suh is a chief research fellow at Korea Environment Institute and currently holds the position of Director General of Sustainable Development Research Group. He earned a Bachelor's degree in chemistry from Seoul National University, completed a Master's degree in Environmental Health at University of Michigan and was awarded a Ph.D. specializing in Occupational and Environmental Health at University of Iowa. Dr. Yang-Won Suh has devoted his career to advancing research in environmental health, policy development for chemical management and risk assessment. He has led many government-sponsored research initiatives as principal investigator and is presently engaged in research on green chemistry. In addition, Dr. Yang-Won Suh contributes as a committee member for both governmental bodies and professional societies in the area of chemical management."